“One of my main focuses on the policy level is to put STEM education forward. This event is organized for Thailand to learn new technologies, to be part of and to be engaged with international communities because we cannot work alone; we have to work with our partners and learn from them as well.”

Dr. Teerakiat Jareonsettasin
Minister of Education, Thailand

FROM ZERO TO HERO

Worlddidac Asia believes teachers must be equipped with 21st century knowledge and skills, and learn how to leverage new technologies to develop pedagogical approaches to content and integrate them into their classroom practice, so that our children meet the demands of a global economy, as well as engage in learning and innovation skills. Preparing future teachers to win this critical battle is one of the top priorities of the governments in this region.

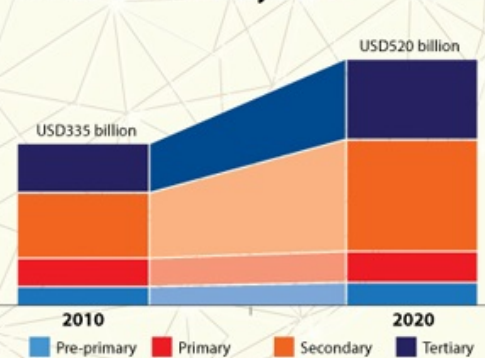

Worlddidac Asia is proud to be a platform for educators to discover new educational resources, gain practical knowledge, find new collaboration and shape their own teaching and learning environments from early years to all level of education. Our focuses are in 4 areas where average 19.1% of national budget in ASEAN countries is spending in.
